After losing all his land (during the Irish Rebellion), James indentured himself to an Englishman by the name of Ward to gain passage to the United States. The ship sailed around 1700 and is said to have docked in Jamestown, Virginia. After arriving in the US, James changed the spelling of his name to 'Nowlin'. James was sold as an indentured servant to a man by the name of Ward. James married his daughter. Became known as James Nowlin of Virginia.

"James was a rugged Irishman of marked ability and high sterling character. He was intellectual, alert, and intensely enthusiastic, high minded, had a grasp of vision and an open understanding that acted with velocity. His executive ability and loyalty have been proven. He made superb employment of historic faith; that principle of power which led him to establish himself as head of a long line of people which in the course of time made the ancestor of many heroes of the Sunny South, one of the great and distinctive political lines of Civil War fame.
